MACRON WINS STRONG PARLIAMENT MAJORITY

1 President Emmanuel Macron won a commanding majority in France's parliamentary election on Sunday, sweeping aside traditional parties and securing a powerful mandate for pro-business reforms. The result, based on official figures and pollster projections, redraws France's political landscape, humiliating the Socialist and conservative parties that alternated in power for decades until Macron's election in May. Three pollsters projected that Macron's Republic on the Move (LREM) and its Modem allies would win 355 to 365 seats in the 577-seat lower house, fewer than previously forecast. Voter turnout was projected to be a record low at about 42 percent. REUTERS

MEDIA: CLARKE RESCINDS HOMELAND SECURITY JOB

2 Milwaukee County Sheriff David Clarke, an African-American who became a staunch critic of the Black Lives Matter movement and a supporter of Donald Trump's presidential campaign, has withdrawn his acceptance for a job as assistant secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, newspapers reported. Clarke notified Secretary of Homeland Security John Kelly of his decision, Craig Peterson, an adviser to Clarke, said in a statement, according to the Washington Post and other newspapers. "Sheriff Clarke is 100 percent committed to the success of President Trump and believes his skills could be better utilized to promote the president's agenda in a more aggressive role," the newspapers quoted Peterson as saying Neither the agency nor Clarke's office immediately responded to requests for comment. US WARPLANE SHOOTS DOWN SYRIAN JET

3 A U.S. warplane shot down a Syrian army jet on Sunday in the southern Raqqa countryside with Washington saying the jet had dropped bombs near U.S. backed forces and Damascus saying the plane was downed while flying a mission against Islamic State militants. A Syrian army statement released on Syrian state television said the plane crashed and the pilot was missing. It said the incident took place on Sunday afternoon near a village called Rasafah. The "flagrant attack was an attempt to undermine the efforts of the army as the only effective force capable with its allies ... in fighting terrorism across its territory," the Syrian army said. REUTERS

PORTUGAL FOREST FIRE

4 Portugal declared three days of national mourning from Sunday after the most deadly forest fire in its recent history, raging through the center of the country. The fire, which broke out on Saturday in the Pedrogao Grande district, had killed at least 62 people and injured more than 50, according to the latest official update by Sunday afternoon. REUTERS

AMAZON ON COLLISION COURSE WITH WAL-MART

5 When Wal-Mart Stores Inc. bought online retailer Jet.com for $3 billion last year, it marked a crucial moment — the world's largest brick-and-mortar retailer, after years of ceding e-commerce leadership to arch rival Amazon, intended to compete. On Friday, Amazon.com Inc. countered. With its $14 billion purchase of grocery chain Whole Foods Market Inc., the e-commerce company announced its intention to take on Wal-Mart in the brick-and-mortar world. The two deals make it clear that the lines that divided traditional retail from e-commerce are disappearing and sector dominance will no longer be bound by e-commerce or brick-and-mortar, but by who is better at both. Amazon's purchase of Whole Foods also brings disruption to the $700 billion U.S. grocery sector, a traditional area of retailing that stands on the precipice of a ferocious price war. REUTERS

BEEN INJURED?

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • LIQUOR LIABILITY• MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

Dram Shop laws hold servers of alcoholic beverages legally responsible for harm that visibly intoxicated patrons cause to others. State liquor liability laws can apply not only to bars, liquor stores and restaurants, but also to social clubs and private events where liquor is served. The laws also include selling liquor without a license, selling liquor after hours and selling liquor to minors.

If a person is served alcoholic beverages while visibly intoxicated, and then gets into an accident injuring someone while driving drunk, the owner of the serving establishment can be held responsible in addition to the drunk driver.

Dram Shop lawsuits aren't limited to auto accidents — if a bar serves a visibly intoxicated person who then starts a fistfight and seriously injures another patron, that patron could sue the bar under the dram shop law.

In order to successfully sue under the dram shop law, you must be able to prove:

1. An employee of an establishment served alcohol to someone at a time that that person was visibly intoxicated and,

2. The business or host's decision to serve alcohol to the visibly intoxicated person directly led to the injuries.

If you feel that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of a Dram Shop violation, call us at (215) 569-1212 to explore whether you may have the right to recover full compensation for your injuries.

How to Fix Philly: New text-to-donate program aims to reduce panhandling

This latest initiative could also help stem the ongoing opioid crisis.

HAYDEN MITMAN
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

As the weather warms up in the summer, many have noticed an increased presence of panhandlers throughout the city.

It's an issue city officials have noticed as well, and they have come up with an alternative way to allow Philadelphians to help those in need. And it could also help make a dent in the ongoing opioid crisis that has impacted the lives of so many.

The program is the new Text-to-Give campaign that will allow anyone to donate $5 via text message to be used in programs that help the homeless, organizers said. Those who work closest with the city's homeless population are hopeful that the plan will make an impact on panhandling throughout the city.

According to Liz Hersh, director of the city's Office of Homeless Services, the city has set aside $25,000 in funds and plans to match all donations until they have a total of $50,000. Then, she said in a recent interview, the city will put out an open call to nonprofits in search of innovative ideas to address panhandling and homelessness in the city.

"[We want] to try things that we haven't before or give funding to programs that are working, in order to expand them," Hersh said.

The city has received about $665 from 133 individuals, with some calling to ask how to donate more, organizers said.

Using the phone to donate could seem like an extra step to take when you're faced with someone on the street asking directly for spare change.

According to Marsha Cohen, executive director of the Homeless Advocacy Project — who helped organize this donation effort — the idea is twofold. One, it makes sure the money you donate is used for services that support the homeless. For instance, Cohen said, there's not only the fear that any money you give directly to a panhandler could be squandered on drugs or alcohol, but often, teams of scam artists collect money under the guise of being needy panhandlers.

"A lot of that money doesn't even go to the people you give it to," she said.

The second benefit of texting in a donation instead of giving cash on the spot, Cohen said, is that individuals who are involved in panhandling might then go to a shelter for food — something they may not have done if they had cash on hand — which allows trained professionals to intervene in that person's life, something that could be a lifesaver for those caught in the grip of addiction.

"If they come in for a meal, we have that chance to confront them and intervene," she said. "This is a way to address this opioid crisis."

To donate $5 to the Mayor's Fund for Philadelphia to help the homeless, text the word "Share" to 80077.

Despite mistrial in criminal case, civil lawsuits await Cosby

Pending civil claims against Cosby have been filed in two states.

Although Bill Cosby's sexual assault trial ended in a mistrial on Saturday, his legal problems persist as he faces assault and defamation claims in civil lawsuits, where the bar for evidence is lower than in criminal cases.

In civil lawsuits in the United States, plaintiffs need only show that the weight of evidence is on their side, meaning they have information to tip the scales above 50 percent in their favor, as opposed to criminal cases in which prosecutors must prove claims beyond a reasonable doubt.

At least 10 women have pending civil claims against Cosby in lawsuits filed in California and Massachusetts.

Two have brought claims against the 79-year-old entertainer for sexual assault. Others, barred from doing so because their claims were too old, have brought defamation claims against him, saying he smeared their reputations by publicly denying their accusations.

The judge in the criminal case against Cosby in Pennsylvania declared a mistrial on Saturday after jurors said they were deadlocked and unable to reach a unanimous verdict on charges that Cosby sexually assaulted Andrea Constand in 2004. At the time, Constand worked at Cosby's alma mater, Temple University.

Bill Cosby leaving court. GETTY IMAGES

David Harris, a professor at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law who specializes in criminal justice, said the hung jury did not mean that a civil jury would clear Cosby of liability.

"There may not be enough evidence for a criminal conviction, but that does not rule out a civil verdict," said Harris.

Approximately 60 accusations of sexual assault have been made against Cosby over a number of years, but only Constand's resulted in criminal charges because the other alleged incidents were too old to prosecute. Cosby has denied all of the accusations.

Constand herself sued Cosby in 2005 and settled for an undisclosed sum.

Women bringing civil cases would also likely find it easier to introduce testimony from other accusers to support claims that Cosby engaged in a pattern of assault, said Douglas Wigdor, a plaintiffs' attorney who represents clients in sexual harassment cases.

Little testimony about other accusations against Cosby was allowed in the Pennsylvania trial because of the strict standards for admitting evidence in criminal cases.

Prosecutors had sought to have 13 other accusers testify in Constand's case, but the judge allowed only one, finding that more would unfairly prejudice the jury.

Even with the lower standard of evidence in civil cases, Rodney Smolla, dean of Delaware Law School, said that plaintiffs bringing defamation claims faced a significant legal challenge.

In addition to proving that Cosby assaulted them, Smolla said, they would have to establish that he said something about them beyond denying the allegations, such as calling them known liars or promiscuous.

"The defamation case is this clever way of saying, 'If I say you raped me, and you say it didn't happen, then you're defaming me by calling me a liar,'" he said. "And that, in itself, is a difficult defamation case." REUTERS

A Juneteenth celebration at the Johnson House Historic Site in Philadelphia COURTESY OF THE JOHNSON HOUSE HISTORIC SITE

Philadelphia Juneteenth celebration to honor slaves' journey to freedom

June 19 is a day of celebration for the descendants of African slaves nationwide.

MICHAEL BUTLER
letters@metro.us

For most Americans, Independence Day is an annual celebration complete with fireworks, barbecues and live music. For the descendants of African slaves in America, however, June 19 — or Juneteenth, as it is commonly known — is the actual triumphant day for celebrating freedom.

The passing of the Emancipation Proclamation has been considered the moment that ended slavery in America. Unfortunately, many slaves were still held captive after it went into effect on Jan. 1, 1863. Many southern states, including Texas, refused to honor the executive order. On June 19, 1865 — more than two years later — Union soldiers entered Galveston, Texas, and told many people who thought they were still slaves that they were free.

Radio personality Mina SayWhat is an advocate for Juneteenth celebrations in the City of Brotherly Love.

"I think it's important for people to know that the Johnson House [historic site] is here. It was a part of the Underground Railroad and is now a museum," she said, adding that the Juneteenth event will offer "great food, face painting for the kids, and we're here giving out free Aquafina water and free soft drinks, so it's also great for the community."

Event planner and WURD radio talk show host Jeff Hart cites Philadelphia's history of being a refugee city as one of the more important reasons for events like Germantown's annual Juneteenth Celebration at the Johnson House historic site.

"The Johnson House first placed that significance on what we today call a 'refugee city.' [Philadelphia] was a refugee city as far back as the 1700s and 1800s for our enslaved ancestors," Hart said.

"Juneteenth brings descendants of former slaves together in ways that celebrate our independence while giving us the motivation to continue making strides forward," he added.

Ship almost foundered after collision, bodies found

The Navy's damaged destroyer USS Fitzgerald sails into its mother port in Japan after a collision at sea. GETTY IMAGES

Multiple U.S. and Japanese investigations are under way on how a ship as large as the container could ram into the warship in clear weather.

The bodies of missing sailors were found in flooded compartments of the USS Fitzgerald, which came close to sinking after a collision with a container ship off Japan tore a gash under the warship's waterline, the U.S. Navy's 7th Fleet commander said on Sunday.

Vice Adm. Joseph P. Aucoin declined to say how many of the seven missing sailors had been recovered, but Japanese media said all had died. "Out of concern for the families and the notification process, I will decline to state how many we have found at this time," Aucoin told a news conference.

The search at sea had ended, Aucoin said.

The USS Fitzgerald could have foundered, or even sunk, but for the crew's desperate efforts to save the ship, he said.

"The damage was significant. There was a big gash under the water," Aucoin said at Yokosuka naval base, home of the U.S. 7th Fleet, the docked Fitzgerald behind him.

"A significant portion of the crew was sleeping" when the destroyer collided with the Philippine-flagged container ship, destroying the commander's cabin, he said.

The Fitzgerald is salvageable, he said, but repairs will likely take months. "Hopefully less than a year. You will see the USS Fitzgerald back," Aucoin said.

Aucoin was asked if damage on the starboard side indicated the U.S. ship could have been at fault, but he declined to speculate on the cause of the collision. Maritime rules suggest vessels are supposed to give way to ships on their starboard.

The 7th Fleet said in a statement earlier on Sunday: "Divers were able to access the space and found a number of bodies." They were transferred to a U.S. naval hospital for identification, it said.

The Fitzgerald collided with the merchant vessel more than three times its size some 56 nautical miles southwest of Yokosuka early on Saturday.

Three people were medically evacuated to the U.S. Naval Hospital in Yokosuka after the collision, including the ship's commanding officer, Bryce Benson, who was reported to be in stable condition, the Navy said.

The other two were being treated for lacerations and bruises.

TRUMP'S AMERICA

TRUMP'S AMERICA: LAWYER UP, LAWYER DOWN

OPINION

Donald Trump says he is under investigation. Donald Trump's lawyer says, no, he isn't. Oh, great!

This early in the Russian-hacking probe, we've already hit the moment where the president starts twisting the meaning of "is" and "isn't."

Back in the 1990s, the Monica Lewinsky decade, that took years for Bill Clinton to get around to. Trump's momentous assertion came in a tweet, of course. That's how most of his momentous assertions arrive. He picked up his phone at 9:08 Friday morning — Trump Daylight Time — and started typing: "I am being investigated for firing the FBI Director by the man who told me to fire the FBI Director! Witch Hunt."

We can debate whether Deputy Attorney General Ron Rosenstein deserves the dis. Was he really the one who got the jumpy president to oust FBI Director James Comey? Trump made that bright move all by himself, he told NBC's Lester Holt. But after the tweet, can there be any doubt that the Russia-coddling prez is now squarely in the sights of special counsel Robert Mueller? Sure, there can be. We're in Trumpville now. Where "is" and "isn't" are often fluid concepts. Where words don't always mean what they say. Where today's presidential assertions are tomorrow's fake news.

So yesterday, here was one of the president's new lawyers, Jay Sekulow, telling Chris Wallace on "Fox News Sunday" that "the president is not and has not been under investigation." Saying he wanted to be "crystal clear" that Trump's legal team is "not aware of any investigation." Added the lawyer: "The tweet came on the heels of a Washington Post story that had five anonymous sources."

"Oh, boy, this is weird," Wallace finally shot back after several rounds of "is" and "isn't" back-and-forth. "You don't know whether there's an investigation."

So, what do we know?

There's one thing we know for certain, however far along we are: Mueller isn't close to finished, whatever the meaning of is is.

Police: Several injured in North London after reports of vehicle ramming pedestrians

Several people were injured in north London early on Monday after reports that a vehicle rammed into pedestrians, British police said.

Police said they were called just after 12:20 a.m. to reports of a collision on Seven Sisters Road, which runs through the Finsbury Park area of the city. The Sun newspaper said a van hit a crowd of people near Finsbury Park mosque.

"There are a number of casualties being worked on at the scene," London police said, describing it as a major incident. "There has been one person arrested."

A Reuters witness saw at least one person being loaded into an ambulance. A number of police and ambulances were in attendance.

The incident followed a series of attacks in Britain.

Eight people were killed and 50 injured on June 3 when three Islamist militants drove into pedestrians on London Bridge and stabbed people at nearby restaurants and bars.

On March 22, a man drove a rented car into pedestrians on Westminster Bridge in London and stabbed a policeman to death before being shot dead. His attack killed five people.

On May 22, a suicide bomber killed 22 people at a concert by American pop singer Ariana Grande in Manchester in northern England.

Colombians leave floral tributes amid probe into deadly Bogota blast

Floral tributes were placed at the Bogota shopping center where three women were killed and nine wounded after an explosive device detonated in a restroom as Colombians flocked to buy gifts ahead of Sunday's Father's Day celebrations.

The normally busy Andino mall was eerily quiet as people placed flowers on the main floor of the upscale retail center, which on Saturday afternoon was the scene of chaos and terror as the device exploded inside a toilet stall on the second floor.

President Juan Manuel Santos denounced the "cowardly terrorist act" and offered a reward of 100 million pesos ($34,258) for information leading to capture of those responsible.

He said investigators are working on three hypotheses but declined to provide any information while the probe is underway. No one has claimed responsibility for the deadly act.

"The objective of terrorism is to sow fear, and our response to that is to show unity and bravery to confront it," said Santos following a security council meeting with members of the armed forces and ministers.

"Colombians must unite and show solidarity to confront such cowardly acts."

He asked residents to be vigilant but not let the attack cower them. Santos later visited Andino's food court to have lunch with his son.

Police said the device was placed behind a toilet bowl. Half a dozen forensic police dressed in white overalls were at the scene on the second floor as scores of uniformed officials and intelligence personnel scanned the mall.

Kenya Moore got secretly married

Kenya Moore, star of "Real Housewives of Atlanta," former Miss USA got secretly married last weekend. She waited a whole week to talk about it. Cool!

The 46-year-old reality star wed in an intimate beach getaway in St. Lucia, as you do. Her husband is a thus far anonymous businessman she met a year ago and started dating a few months later. And she's all about keeping his identity private. For now.

"I'm ecstatic," she told People. "This man is the love of my life and I'm so happy to begin our lives together as husband and wife." So ecstatic, in fact, that she took to Instagram to write some cheesy messages imbued with the high that comes from marrying someone you've been dating for less than a year.

Anyway, cool about you meeting the love of your life and getting secretly married just to expose said secret message on Instagram. Have fun with that!

Will Janet Jackson's custody battle get 'Nasty'?

Oh, dear.

Janet Jackson's divorce is heating up.

The 51-year-old is, of course, in the midst of a divorce battle with estranged husband and Qatari billionaire Wissam Al Mana. The split could get her up to $200 million under terms of their prenup.

Both Jackson and Al Mana were spotted leaving the Royal Courts of Justice in London on Thursday, months after the singer confirmed their separation in a video to her fans. "I just want to keep it real with you guys," she says. "Yes, I separated from my husband. We are in court and the rest is in God's hands."

In the same video message, the "Dammn Baby" singer announced that her Unbreakable tour will kick off in September. She had originally rescheduled to accommodate the birth of her son Eissa, who was born in January. Now, sources claim that custody of their newborn son could be an issue — especially as she prepares for her major tour. Reps for the singer have yet to comment.

Beyonce finally has her twins

The twin saviors have finally blessed us with their presence. What I mean is, sources tell Us Weekly and People that Beyonce finally welcomed her twins!

Beyonce's dad confirmed the news that his eldest daughter welcomed a girl and a boy in Los Angeles last Monday. TMZ reports that despite giving birth last week, the twins are still being kept in the hospital because of a minor issue. Beyonce is reportedly still there with them.

Celebrities react to Bill Cosby mistrial

Lena Dunham was one of many who spoke out.

Bill Cosby's trial ended on Saturday in a mistrial, which, ugh.

Now celebrities are reacting over Cosby — who has admitted to giving young women strong sedatives before, you know — escaping justice.

Bette Midler, for one, is piiiiiissed — about Cosby and Philando Castille, too. "WTF? The cop who we SAW murder Philando Castile gets off and Bill Cosby, who drugged and raped for years, does too. #whathappenedtojuries?"

And Lena Dunham, many women's problematic fave, had the most to say. "Bill Cosby's trial is about much more than Bill Cosby," she wrote in a series of tweets. "When women see justice served, their own fear and trauma are erased."

Strong opinions, and rightfully so. Although, I do wonder: What does Keisha Knight Pulliam think about all of this?

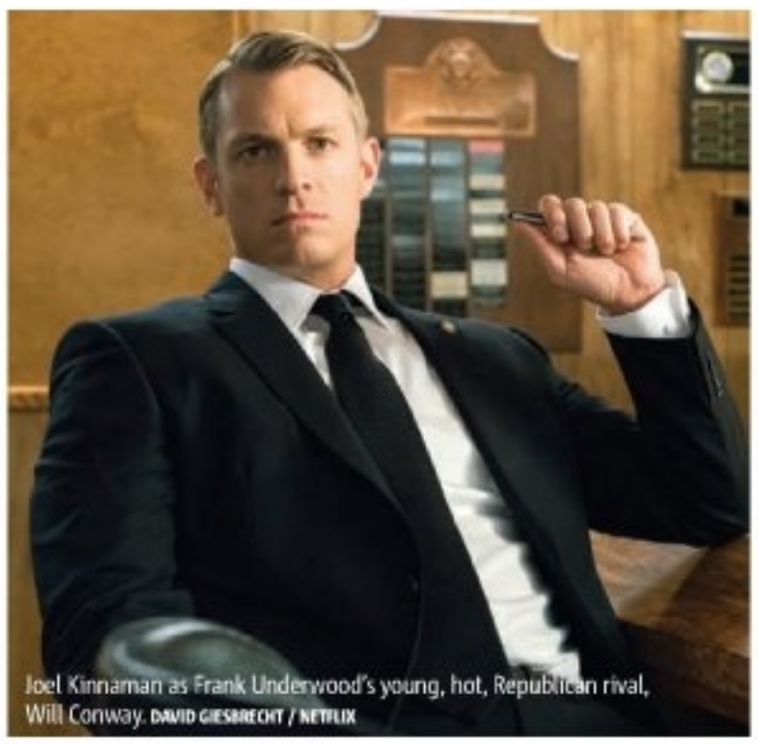
Joel Kinnaman would rather have Berlusconi than Trump

The charming Swede talks "House of Cards," Trump and "Suicide Squad."

JANA POLLACK
@tinyjana
letters@metro.us



Joel Kinnaman as Frank Underwood's young, hot, Republican rival, Will Conway. DAVID GIESBRECHT / NETFLIX

If you haven't binged the fifth season of "House of Cards," what are you even doing? The show came back with a vengeance this year — and its usual brand of ruthless politics suddenly hit very close to home. One of the only mostly good guys around was Frank Underwood's young Republican rival, Will Conway. "I'm drawn to interesting characters," says actor Joel Kinnaman, who plays Will. "I want to have a character that has a journey, that really evolves."

What was it like doing a show about politics in 2017?
It was crazy! It's crazy what's been going on. I never thought that reality was going to come close to what we're doing on "House of Cards," and it sure as hell did.

Did you talk about it with your co-stars on set?
It's been a constant source of indignation and conversation. I think there's a lot of people who feel that we're in the middle of a complete crisis — our national identity is being hijacked. It's very saddening to see what's going on, that America's standing in the world is getting weakened, and that we're losing the leadership role when it comes to the environment and to human rights.

And to think that anyone was going to rival President Underwood's (Kevin Spacey) unlikeability, and the level of distrust from the public would rise to this kind of level, I didn't think was going to be possible. I was saying before the election, that if Trump gets elected, we're all going to know what it was like to be the Italians under Berlusconi. I think I would rather have Berlusconi than President Trump.

Would you compare Trump to Underwood?
I would take Underwood any day of the week! President Underwood isn't going start a nuclear war because someone tweeted at him in the wrong way.

Now that TV's in this golden age do you look more to TV?
There's still something really magical with doing a film — every scene is such an important piece of the character's journey, and almost every scene is moving the character forward. And in TV, you really get time to go deep, and to have that slow evolution, and you have much more time to play as well, so you get into the character even more. But I really like doing both, I really like to mix it up.

How do you think Wonder Woman would fare against the Suicide Squad?
[Laughs] Well we'd definitely give her a run for her money. I just saw it, I loved it. It's so good. I was actually really moved thinking about all those little girls going to the movies and seeing this film, and to think of how it's going to change the way that they see themselves in the world. And I'm so happy for my girl Patty Jenkins — Patty directed the pilot of "The Killing," and also the final episode of the second season, so I was so happy to see that she did such a good film.

The festival attracts 200,000 people each year. ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

The largest art festival in the tristate area is happening this weekend as Main Street in Manayunk becomes an avenue for buying and selling art. Whether you're in the market for home decor or something fun to wear, the Manayunk Arts Festival is coming up and is the place to get everything and anything made by artists from throughout the region. The festival attracts more than 200,000 makers and shoppers in one weekend. The number of vendors makes it difficult to narrow down your stops during the festival. Here are seven vendors you can't miss.

Portrait perfection

Artphysic's colorful and trippy portraits are definitely worth looking at. Whether you need a David Bowie print in your life or an ethereal canvas, artist Allegra Yvonne Gia brings plenty of color to the festival. Prints start at $20 and prices vary for original paintings.

The Great Chefs Event from last year raised nearly $800,000 for Alex's Lemonade Stand and Vetri Community Partnership. PROVIDED

The Great Chefs Event turns 12

It's the ultimate foodie fundraiser.

JENNIFER LOGUE
@jenniferlogue
jennifer.logue@metro.us

On Tuesday, June 20, over 1,200 foodie philanthropists will come together for the 12th annual Great Chefs event, taking place at the Urban Outfitters' Headquarters in the Navy Yard.

Dubbed the "culinary event of the year," it wrangles up 40 of the best chefs from around the world to cook up a storm for guests, all to support Alex's Lemonade Stand and Vetri Community Partnership.

Like Great Chefs Events of the past, Marc Vetri has personally selected the participating talent, who hail from New York City, Los Angeles, Chicago, Montreal and more.

This year's lineup includes newcomers Hugh Acheson (5 & 10 in Athens, Georgia), Frank Castronovo & Frank Falcinetti (Frankies Spuntino & Prime Meats in Brooklyn, New York), Derek Dammann of (Maison Publique in Montreal), Evan Funke (Felix in Los Angeles), Sara Jenkins (Nina June in Rockport, Maine) and Ryan Poli (The Catbird Seat in Nashville).

Returning chefs include Paul Kahan (Blackbird, Avec, The-Publican and Big Star in Chicago) and Alex Guarnaschelli (Butter in NYC and television personality on The Food Network).

A number of the chefs have even been recognized by the James Beard Foundation in 2017, like Outstanding Restaurateur winner, Ken Oringer (Toro in NYC) and Outstanding Chef, Outstanding Service winner, Michael Solomonov (Cook n Solo in Philadelphia). Best Chefs finalists like Michael Cimarusti (Connie & Ted's in Los Angeles), Andy Ticer + Michael Hudman (Andrew Michael Italian Kitchen in Memphis) and Philly's own Greg Vernick (Vernick) will also participate.

In addition to the exceptional food, there will be a number of featured beverage personalities that include heavy hitters in wine, beer and mixology.

Outside of eating and drinking, guests will be able to bid on silent and live auction items, like one-of-a-kind culinary experiences (imagine one of these chefs cooking for you personally!), the hottest concert tickets, autographed memorabilia and more.

"The Great Chefs Event is an amazing way to experience unique culinary offerings from world-renowned chefs and give back to two important Foundations in the community," says founder of Alex's Lemonade Stand, Jay Scott.

If you'd like to attend, tickets are $350 for general admission and $525 for access to the main event as well as the after party. Sponsorships start at $1000.

Last year's event raised almost $800,000 for Alex's Lemonade Stand and Vetri Community Partnership.

JOBS OF THE FUTURE

Mechanical engineers take design to the next level

jobs & education

Mechanical engineers design, develop and build devices. ISTOCK

LEARN ABOUT THE TOP CAREERS OF 2017

These experts are the "jack-of-all-trades."

SARA FEINSTEIN
@SaraBFeinstein
sara.feinstein@metro.us

When people think of mechanical engineers, they tend to envision a sort of handyman.

"They think that you're also a mechanic, and that you want to fix anything that's broken— especially cars and computers," explains mechanical engineer Israr Kabir.

But that's not really what the job entails.

While "fixing" is certainly an aspect of the job, these experts are actually responsible for designing and overseeing the manufacturing of products ranging from auto parts to cellphones. They get to research, build and test new devices using some of the most advanced technology.

We spoke with Israr Kabir, business development manager, manufacturing, at the American Society of Mechanical Engineers to find out more about the profession:

What does a mechanical engineer do?

"Mechanical engineers are the jack-of-all-trades," says Kabir. Not only do they research, design and build products, they also analyze and test the individual parts. When it comes to building an iPhone, "that means making sure that the phone doesn't overheat when charged and that the center button survives 1 million pushes," he explains.

"Whether it's estimating the cost related to a particular design or actually designing and manufacturing a product — a mechanical engineer is involved."

What schooling do you need?

Those interested in pursuing the profession need to earn a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering, says Kabir. While it's possible to find a job with an undergraduate degree, those who are looking to specialize — for example, robotics, nuclear energy, biomedical engineering, or aerospace — may choose to enroll in a masters program.

What's the typical salary?

The median annual salary for mechanical engineers is $84,190, according to the most recent reports by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The best-paid 10 percent in the profession made more than $131,350, while the lowest-paid 10 percent made $54,420.

Finding employment

While everyone continues to panic about robots stealing their jobs, mechanical engineers can rest easy. "We'd actually be designing and building that robot, if you think about it," says Kabir.

"Because of the level of thought required — there's a lot of in-depth thinking from a technical and mathematical standpoint— it's not really a job that could be easily automated."

Plus, "companies are always looking for mechanical engineers," he continues. Those entering the field have their pick of industries, thanks to the variety of businesses that employ mechanical engineers, such as consumer products, energy mining, and even hardware startups.

The pros

Mechanical engineers have one of the greatest job perks: They get to use their creativity.

They also get to witness firsthand some of the cutting-edge technologies being developed, and incorporate them into their design strategy, explains Kabir. "That's always fun."

The cons

The biggest challenge of manufacturing products is the constant pressure to create cheaper parts, says Kabir. The time constraints are also very demanding, he explains. "When a project is assigned or a new design is requested by a customer, the delivery deadlines are usually pretty tight."

And mechanical engineers need to get things right— the first time. "If you don't do your calculations right or you don't do your dimensions properly, it's very hard to just start over," he says.

5 Things to know about the Sixers' presumptive pick

Meet the soon-to-be newest Sixer, Markelle Fultz.

KYLE PHILLIPPI
@Kyle_Phillippi
sports@metro.us

Markelle Fultz could be a pivotal part of the Sixers' next contending team. GETTY IMAGES

Projected as the No. 1 pick throughout the draft process, Markelle Fultz was never really linked to the 76ers because of their draft position at No. 3. Yet, within a matter of 24 hours, Fultz was thrusted into the Sixers' picture and ultimately found himself working out in front of the team after they all but completed a move up to the No. 1 spot in Thursday's NBA Draft.

With that said, let's introduce Fultz and some things you may not have known about the newest piece to the Sixers' puzzle:

1 He's familiar with the area

Fultz's hometown is in Maryland, slightly more than a two hour ride to the city. He's been in the area multiple times, admitting so after his workout on Saturday. He also was asked about the Sixers hat he conveniently arrived wearing.

"I come to Philly a lot," Fultz said. "Just showing the love for the city. I mean I'm out here, I want to show love."

He also would enjoy playing somewhat close to home where "a lot of my family can come out and just show love. This city has great fans."

2 Freshman records

Fultz lit up the Pac-12 in his only season, setting the highest scoring (23.2) for a rookie in 20 years. He led all freshman in scoring across the country and finished sixth overall nationally. His 579 points is a Washington freshman record. He picked up five 30-point games, including his first game where he finished 11-for-17 and 2-for-5 against Yale.

3 Connections mean a lot

There were bigger offers out there for Fultz coming out of high school, including perennial powers in Arizona and Louisville. Yet, Fultz chose a program in Washington that hasn't made the tournament since 2011.

Why?

He had a close bond with their head coach, Lorenzo Romar, as well as an assistant coach who was also from Maryland.

For what it's worth, Fultz said on Saturday that he and Embiid have spoken for quite some time now. "He's a cool guy. He's giving me tips and pointers and he's pretty funny."

4 Knee concern

Ugh, the dreaded injury factor. The Sixers have dealt far too much with damaged goods over the years, and while Fultz doesn't have the label of being injury-prone, it's important to note that he did deal with a knee injury that caused him to miss six games. It should also be noted, though, that the program was cautious with his injury, which likely is why he missed so much time for a sore knee.

5 High school success

Fultz has been around NBA talent his whole life, even just walking down the halls at DeMatha Catholic. The program has sent a handful of players to the highest level, including Victor Oladipo, former Sixer Jeremi Grant and former Duke standout Danny Ferry, among others.

Fultz didn't play varsity until his junior campaign and has enjoyed his rise to the top of the charts.

"It was a dream I've had since I was a young kid," Fultz said. "Like I said, it just shows how much hard work I put in. How dedicated I am to do what I do. I set goals for myself and I go out there and achieve them."

EMBIID, SIMMONS AND FULTZ FORMING HOMEGROWN 'SUPERTEAM'

@evan_macy

We are in the age of the superteam.

The Celtics (Paul Pierce, Ray Allen, Kevin Garnett), Heat (LeBron James, Chris Bosh, Dwyane Wade), Cavaliers (James, Kyrie Irving, Kevin Love) and Warriors (Kevin Durant, Steph Curry, Klay Thompson, Draymond Green) have redefined the landscape of the NBA and the way championships are won.

It's not enough anymore to have a team built around depth and role players. It's now seemingly a requirement for a team to have three or more superstars playing together in order to contend.

It may not have been explicitly discussed as the Sixers began their painstaking four-season tank job under Sam Hinkie, but the main goal of the process was to somehow, some way create a superteam in Philadelphia.

Joel Embiid has only played 31 games in the NBA. He's missed two entire seasons and another half due to injury. But his transcendence as a two-way center who can shoot, play in the post and defend made him a legitimate All-Star candidate and rookie of the year front-runner last season.

Ben Simmons has missed an entire season as well, also with a foot injury — but the 2016 first overall pick has the makings of a Magic Johnson-like point guard.

Markelle Fultz — the presumptive first overall pick in Thursday's NBA draft — has also been described as a sure All-Star, a franchise-changing player who can score, distribute, defend and become a longtime NBA superstar.

After years of misery, the light at the end of The Process is finally visible. TWITTER.COM/JOELEMBIID

Embiid, Simmons and Fultz. The trio, if they can stay healthy, could be the next true superteam in the NBA.

Since 1980, 77 percent of first overall picks have played in All-Star games. That is a pretty good track record. With two first overalls in tow — each set to debut in 2017-18 and Embiid, who if healthy could be one of the most dominant big men in the league — the potential is earth-shattering.

And in Robert Covington and Dario Saric, the Sixers appear to have some pretty solid role players on the roster already.

The Sixers' method of tanking was rewarded mightily as the assets accumulated awarded them the ability to jettison some top draft picks — like Michael Carter-Williams, Nerlens Noel and potentially Jahlil Okafor — and continue to collect young players and draft picks until they hit on three they liked.

If the Embiid-Simmons-Fultz core pans out, it could have enormous implications for the NBA as a whole, and could spur rule changes if too many other teams attempt to replicate their process.

But that's putting the cart before the horse. The Sixers still have a ton of work to do, and it will fall on Brett Brown to push the right buttons and develop a team that can contend for a playoff spot next season, which is what Philly fans will be expecting after the fireworks this offseason.

LEGAL NOTICES

PUBLIC NOTICE OF SUBMISSION OF A NATIONAL POLLUTANT DISCHARGE ELIMINATION SYSTEM (NPDES) PERMIT APPLICATION

Rise Labs, LLC, 30 S. 15th Street, Suite 1000, Philadelphia, Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania, intends to make application with the Southeastern Regional Office of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (PA DEP) for an NPDES permit.

The site is currently a vacant Superfund Site. The site is proposed to be used as a growing/processing facility. The site will implement different levels of security and all operations will be performed inside a building to be constructed at the site. The application will permit the facility to discharge stormwater from the site to the Delaware River.

This application is made under the provisions of the Clean Streams Law, the Act of June 22, 1937, P.L. 1987, as amended. Persons desiring additional information concerning this permit application should contact the applicant as indicated above. Persons who wish to comment on this application should contact the company as indicated above, or the PA DEP at the following address: Mr. Pravin Patel, PA Department of Environmental Protection, Southeastern Regional Office, 2 E. Main Street, Norristown, Pennsylvania, 19401.

CHANGE OF NAME NOTICE

Court of Common Pleas for the County of Philadelphia, May term, 2017, No. 1800.

Notice is hereby given that on May 15th, the petition of Anne Miller was filed, praying for a decree to change her name to Anne Miller-Uueda.

The Court has fixed courtdate, July 7th, 2017 at 1:00 PM, in Room No. 691, City Hall, Philadelphia, PA for hearing. All persons interested may appear and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the said petition should not be granted.

Aries Don't get worked up over nothing. Erratic behavior will lead to trouble, while carefully considered ideas will help you get what you want and stabilize your life.

Taurus Stay focused on what and who is important to you. A personal change will make you feel good about your future. Look for innovative ways to get fit and to stay healthy.

Gemini Strive for perfection through dedication and hard work. Your talents will not go unnoticed, and your voice will be heard. Press forward earnestly and you will excel.

Cancer Don't get angry when you can get moving. It's up to you to make things happen. Stick to your plan and take care of your responsibilities without causing a fuss.

Leo Greater involvement in events that will help change the lives of disadvantaged people will make you feel good, but don't neglect your responsibilities to your family.

Virgo Be careful what you say. Someone will twist your words or use the information you provide against you. Be precise and leave nothing to chance. Work alone, if possible.

Libra You'll be eager to try new things, but before you jump in, make sure that you have taken care of your chores or any promises you made to a friend or loved one.

Scorpio Your magnetism will not be wasted. You will charm someone who has something unique to offer to you. Love and self-improvement are featured.

Sagittarius If you express your desire for change or share your ideas to improve your life and work, you will receive several helpful suggestions. Be open to good advice.

Capricorn Participate in events and activities geared toward meeting new people. Your passionate approach to life, love and success will lead to an interesting partnership.

Aquarius Take care of personal business without delay and avoid criticism. What you do will be valued, but empty promises will not. Finish what you start and move on.

Pisces You'll be put in a vulnerable position if you don't choose your words wisely. Your charm will open doors, but living up to your promises will keep them open. EUGENIA LAST
